Being Deposited: What Every OMS Needs To Know

During the discovery phase of litigation, the defendant OMS is deposed by the plaintiff’s (the patient’s) attorney. At first glance, the OMS may view the deposition as an opportunity to share their side of the story. However, the natural instinct to teach and mentor is contrary to how the OMS should respond when being deposed.

OMSNIC defense counsel, Judith Feinberg-Albright and Dr. Andrew Read-Fuller demonstrate the art of being deposed through two mock depositions: one in which the deposition goes poorly, and the other where the deposition goes well.

View a clip of the mock deposition.

Judith Feinberg-Albright, Esq. deposes Dr. Andrew Read-Fuller in a mock deposition presented at the AAOMS Annual Meeting during the OMSNIC/ROAAOMS Resident Educational Symposium.

View The Complete Presentation

Did you miss this presentation at the Annual Meeting? A recording of the complete presentation is available at omsnic.com in the e-Learning Center. Login and click “Risk Management Courses” on the left. Click the “Mock Deposition: What to Expect During Witness Testimony” link to view the recording.